

Permission to bring fictional works outside the library

At the University library in Lund fictional works are only to be read in-house. Exceptions are made for staff with a close connection to the department of literary studies at Lund university. Patrons with that kind of connection can be allowed to bring fictional works to their office, but not to their home.

The following criteria must be reached for the patron to be allowed to bring the fictional work to their department office:

- The book is Swedish fiction or international fiction in Swedish translation
- The book is more than 50 pages
- The book is published in 1900 or later
- The patron is a teacher, researcher, professor, postgraduate student or active professor emeritus/emerita and has an email address at the department of literature, Lund university
- The person has a room/office at the department of literature, Lund university. That's the only place where the fictional work will be allowed transport to, outside the library

I consent to the above rules and hereby attest to that the fictional works I bring to my office are to be used by me and will only be read there.

I also promise to hand back the material to the University library in the same condition that it was when loaned.
